Montessori at Home:
55 Practical Life Activities

Author : Elvina Lim Kusumo
ISBN: 978-602-6847-11-9
Size: 20 x 20 cm

Actually, for a long time I realized that my life's calling is to be a mom and to take care of my children at home like my mother and mother-in-law. It turns out, being a mother is not as easy as I imagined. My motivation to improve myself and to continue learning for the sake of my children and families is the reason why I determined to read literatures and seeking inputs from various sources to explore childhood education, especially the Montessori approach.

Now I pour various information and experiences from activities that I did with C at home into this book, which contains a collection of activities entitled Montessori at Home. One thing that I expect from the book is to make it easier for parents of young children to begin their journey to prepare positive activities and stimulations for their children. Have fun with Montessori activities with your children!

Baby Care 101

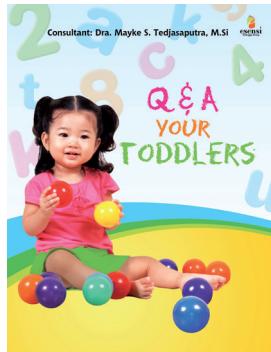

Author: Riescha Puri Gayatri
Size: 22 x 22 cm
ISBN: 978-602-684-759-1

NEW

Being a mother is perhaps the most important job out there. Mothers are never provided any guidelines on how to raise their children—yet it is amazing just how much they have achieved in motherhood.

When facing maternity problems, the many and varied solutions mothers might acquire from well-intended friends and family members are often contradictory and therefore confusing. The vast materials available on the Internet are also not much of a help in guiding mothers to separate the myths from the facts.

This is where Baby Care 101 comes in. Complete with all the essential information on motherhood, Baby Care 101 compiles facts from credible and trusted sources (such as the What to Expect series from Workman Publishing Co.) in the form of eye-catching infography, so that it is easier and more fun to read.

Institutional Economic

Author: Prof.Dr. Ahmad Erani yustika
ISBN: 978-602-241-359-2
Size: 20 x 26 cm

Institutional economics focuses on understanding the role of the evolutionary process and the role of institutions in shaping economic behavior. Many countries with classic/neoclassic market mechanism produce policies that create both welfare and its "bad side". This "bad side" is not the result of the policy itself, but mostly because in the classic/neoclassic thoughts, philosophically, there is defect in their basic assumption.

At this point, institutional economics tell us that economic activities are heavily influenced by many theories, such as political economy, transaction cost economics, asymmetric information, social capital, collective action, contract, property rights, etc. There is always potential of misconduct in applying only market mechanism. Therefore, non-market institution is needed to keep the market from endless failures, by mean of designing a sound institutional economics. The book fulfills the much-needed of institutional economics textbook for undergraduate and graduate students. It explains the institutional economics from its paradigms, theories, to its policies in rich and comprehensive texts.
